

Formula 1 changes its engines and sparks backlash from fans and drivers!

Since 2014, Formula 1 has used turbocharged hybrid V6 engines, which have always generated debates and mixed opinions among fans. However, for 2026, the FIA (Fédération Internationale de l'Automobile) implemented a system with 50% electric power, which has caused significant backlash among drivers, fans, and stakeholders. Many say that the FIA has created the worst regulation in history and is now planning to change it in the middle of the season. Many fans are now hoping for a change in regulations, after saying that the races are artificial, and drivers saying that it looks like Mario Kart.
